

Legal Opportunity

This is a unique opportunity to join a small company that publishes a mainstream criminal justice magazine with nationwide distribution. The legal aspect will focus on the areas of constitutional law, statutory regulations and government code. Under the direction of a supervising attorney, you will assist in preparation of original motions and subsequent briefs, participate in any necessary depositions, and logistically prepare cases for trial. This opportunity will provide you with excellent constitutional and business law experience.

You should be very detail-oriented, organized, and committed to producing a quality work product within a defined time frame. Your written and oral communication skills should be exemplary.

You should have a degree from an accredited law school and California bar membership and 1-5 years of experience.

The organization is a virtual company across the nation, therefore you will work from your home office and it is imperative that you are a self-starter, highly motivated, and trust worthy.

Please send your resume and writing samples to recruiter marcy@nicolaiconsulting.com and include "Legal Job" in the subject line.
